1. House/flat share

This is the most common type of private accommodation for students, where you can rent a property with friends.

Start from £ 150 Per week.

2. Room in a private house

This is where you rent a room out in a house where the landlord currently lives. Whilst this probably isn't the type of accommodation you imagined during your college days; if you've left it late looking for private rented housing, it's probably preferable to the more dingy student houses.

Start from £ 150 Per week.

3. Private flat

Private flats can appear extremely appealing if you've had bad experiences previously sharing with other students. The two things to consider are firstly, whether you enjoy your own company â understand that whilst you'll probably be out socializing in the day; you'll most likely be by yourself most nights. The other thing to consider with private flats is the price most expensive accommodation on this list.

1-bedroom flat start from £ 200 per week

2-bedroom flat start from £ 300 per week

3-bedroom flat start from £400 per week

4. Private sector halls of residence/Hostel

These properties tend to be like University/College owned halls of residence, except they're open to everyone, and are generally more expensive as they're privately owned. The contracts are normally 52 weeks and as they're independent,

Start from Single room: £ 150 per week and Double Room £ 175/200 per week.

5. Host Family accommodation

Home stay accommodation is generally requested by English language student.

Start from £ 230 per week.
